Welcome to the future of work 2023

Economies are at a pivotal point for the future of work and labour markets. Workforce and workplace expectations are changing as organizations adapt to flexible models. Developed economies are tackling major skills and employment challenges in the context of a cost-of-living crisis, rising inflation and labour shortages.

This evolving landscape presents an opportunity for organizations and governments alike to build a thriving world of work that puts human capital at its core. Creating more inclusive labour markets, investing in skills and innovation, and pioneering new employment models, can improve productivity and career longevity across occupations.

The 6th annual Future of Work conference will delve into the key trends and tackle current labour market challenges. Discussions will cover topics ranging from leveraging AI responsibly, upskilling to deliver the green agenda, to managing generational transitions within the workforce.

Convening in the historic Chatham House building, the conference will bring together business leaders, policymakers, representatives from multilateral institutions and labour market experts.

We look forward to welcoming you for a day of interactive panel discussions and networking opportunities, as well as in person exclusive spotlight sessions held under the Chatham House Rule.

Please get in touch if you would like further information or assistance registering.

Kind regards,
