

Contributors

ROY ALLISON is Professor of Russian and Eurasian International Relations, University of Oxford, and Director of the Russian and Eurasian Studies Centre, St Antony's College, Oxford. He was Reader of International Relations, London School of Economics until 2011 and Head of the Russia and Eurasia Programme, Chatham House, during 1993–2005. He is the author or co-author of five books and the editor or co-editor of five more, as well as numerous articles. His most recent book is Russia, the West and military intervention (2013). He has directed many research projects on the international relations, foreign and security policies of Russia and Eurasia.

FRANCISCO C. DA CONCEIÇÃO is Assistant Professor at the Political Science Department of the Eduardo Mondlane University, Mozambique. His research interests are development cooperation policies, South–South cooperation, African politics and Mozambique's development.

MAHRUKH DOCTOR is Senior Lecturer in Political Economy at the University of Hull and Adjunct Professor of Latin American Studies at the Johns Hopkins University (SAIS-Europe) in Bologna. Her research interests include the political economy of Brazil (especially business–state relations), Brazilian foreign policy and regionalism in Latin America (especially Mercosur and EU–Mercosur relations). She is author of Business–state relations in Brazil: challenges of the port reform lobby (2017), and has published in many journals including Review of International Political Economy, Journal of European Public Policy, Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of Latin American Studies, Global Society, Bulletin of Latin American Research and Oxford Development Studies.

CONSTANCE DUNCOMBE is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in the School of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Queensland, Australia. Her research interests include critical and interdisciplinary engagements with contemporary world politics; Middle East politics and culture; and the role of new/social media and its effect on contemporary world politics. Her work has been published in the European Journal of International Relations (2015) and Global Change, Peace and Security (2011).

CHRISTOPH HARIG is a PhD candidate in Security Studies at King's Brazil Institute, King's College London. His research interests in the fields of security studies and international relations include civil–military relations, military sociology and foreign policy decision making. He holds a Magister degree in Political Science and Spanish Philology from the University of Potsdam; and a Master’s degree in the ‘Research Training Program in Social Sciences’ from Humboldt University of Berlin.

Contributors

KAI MICHAEL KENKEL is Associate Professor at the Institute of International Relations at the Pontifical Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro (IRI/PUC-Rio); and Associated Researcher at the Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS), German Institute for Global and Area Studies (GIGA), Hamburg.

DANILO MARCONDES is a Brazilian scholar who has just completed his PhD in the Department of Politics and International Studies at the University of Cambridge. His subject matter is Brazilian–Mozambican cooperation in the fields of health and agriculture. He is currently a postdoctoral researcher at the Institute of International Relations at the Pontifical Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro (IRI/PUC-Rio).

ANA MARGHERITIS is Reader in International Relations at the University of Southampton and Associate Fellow at ILAS, School of Advanced Study, University of London. She previously worked at University of Florida, The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, and Tulane University in the US; and Universidad Torcuato Di Tella in Argentina. She also holds visiting positions at Columbia University, University of California at San Diego, Getulio Vargas Foundation in Rio de Janeiro, ITAM in Mexico, University of Milan, CERI at Sciences Po in Paris, CEACS at Juan March Institute in Madrid, and FLACSO Ecuador. She is the author of several books, the most recent being Migration governance across regions: state-diaspora relations in the Latin American–Southern Europe corridor (2016).

EMMA MAWDSLEY is a Reader in the Geography Department at the University of Cambridge. She has worked extensively on South–South Development Cooperation. More recently she has started work on the politics of international development more broadly, including private sector-led development, financialization, and donor exit and transition.

TIMÓTEO S. M’BUNDE is a PhD candidate in Political Science at the Rio de Janeiro State University. His research interests are development cooperation policies, South–South cooperation, Chinese and Brazilian cooperation policies in Africa, and Guinea-Bissau’s development.

CARLOS R. S. MILANI is Associate Professor at the Rio de Janeiro State University’s Institute for Social and Political Studies (IESP-UERJ), and a senior research fellow with the Brazilian National Science Council (CNPq). Between January and December 2017, he is Visiting Researcher at the University of California, Berkeley. His research agenda includes Brazilian foreign policy, comparative foreign policy, development cooperation policies and politics, and his latest publications are Agência Brasileira de Cooperação: 30 anos de história e desafios futuros (2017) and Atlas of Brazilian foreign policy (2016).

Contributors

AVINASH PALIWAL is Lecturer in Diplomacy and Public Policy at SOAS, University of London. He specializes in the strategic affairs of South Asia and Afghanistan. Previously he held a lectureship in Defence Studies at King's College London. Prior to joining academia he worked as a journalist and foreign affairs analyst in New Delhi. He is the author of My enemy's enemy: India in Afghanistan from the Soviet invasion to the US withdrawal (2017).

LETICIA PINHEIRO is Associate Professor at the Rio de Janeiro State University's Institute for Social and Political Studies (IESP-UERJ), and a senior research fellow with the Brazilian National Science Council (CNPq). Her most recent publications are 'The politics of Brazilian foreign policy and its analytical challenges' (Foreign Policy Analysis, early view, 2016), and Foreign policy decision-making under the Geisel government: the president, the military and the foreign ministry (2013). Her current research interests are Brazilian foreign policy; foreign policy analysis; democracy, global health and international cooperation for development.

MARIA REGINA SOARES DE LIMA is national senior researcher at the Rio de Janeiro State University's Institute for Social and Political Studies and senior research fellow with the Brazilian National Science Council (CNPq). She is also Nelson Mandela Visiting Professor at Rhodes University, South Africa, 2016–17. Her recent publications include The political economy of Brazilian foreign policy: nuclear energy, trade and Itaipu (2013) and 'Rethinking global and domestic challenges in Brazilian foreign policy', in J. I. Domínguez and A. Covarrubias, eds, Routledge handbook of Latin America in the world (2015, co-authored with Monica Hirst). Her current research interests are Brazilian foreign policy; defense policy and foreign policy; regions and regional powers.

PAGE WILSON is an Associate Professor at the University of Iceland. Between 2008 and 2013, she was a Senior Lecturer in international relations and law at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. Her research interests focus on the interplay between international security and international law, as well as issues surrounding Arctic governance. Her first book, Aggression, crime and international security was published in 2009, and subsequent works have appeared in journals including Cooperation and Conflict, Global Society and Arctic Yearbook.

